RAILROAD GETS AMPLE GROUNDS

Controversy With Massman Heirs Ended

AMICABLY ADJUSTED

Long Drawn Out Contention Finally Settled By Efforts of B. J. Rosewater

As it will be remembered the ground adjoining the depot has been a matter of contention for several years. The railroad company claimed that it was absolutely necessary to acquire part of it in order to build a new depot to make the urgently needed improvements in the yards and to place the repair shops on a permanent basis and was willing to pay a few hundred dollars for the ground wanted but not $5000. which the Massman heirs, the owners of the land, wanted.

An indirect effort was made to solve the situation by obtaining an order from the county court to move the county road running alongside the depot farther up on the hillside, a really needed change, and at the same time it was thought that it would vacate a strip of ground 50 feet wide which the railroad might use, but in the deed which conveyed to the railroad company the present depot ground it is stipulated that a strip 50 feet wide pointed to the Searcy position to have charge of structures, right of way, stations, grounds and all employees connected with these branches of the work.

Head Counters Test

Forty-five applicants for census enumerators appeared at the high school building last Saturday to take the test necessary to qualify for that position.

Mr. E. B. Mattox, local secretary of the civil service board, met the applicants and gave them the test. They came from all parts of Carroll county and made a fine appearance as they sat busy over the test questions.

Apples

In bright, sunny June a bold lad and sweet lass play'd under the June apple tree; The rosy-cheek'd fruit almost cover'd the grass, where the children had thrown it in glee. Beside the flush'd cheek of the dear little maid, the boy held an apple so red;

"Now which shall I bite?" "I am almost afraid I'll eat you, not the apple," he said. And then, with great glee, and shouting with glee, took alternate kiss and apple. From cheek and from apple; "I tell you," said he, "I love these June apples, and right."

In late, glowing summer, a youth and a maid sat under the "Maiden Blush" trees, Where ripe, mellow apples their beauty display'd; sweet fragrance perfuming the breeze.

The two linger'd long 'neath the fruit-laden boughs whose burden hung temptingly near; And only the birds and the bees heard the vows which the lover breath'd low in the ear

Of the maid, whose soft blushes the apple's out-shone, as she listen'd with smiling content; "I love Maiden Blushes, my darling, my own;" 'twas not the apples he meant.

In autumn, these twain, now one flesh, came once more, and stray'd 'neath the branches, now bare; The apples were gathered; the harvest was o'er; a tender haze filled all the air.

Blood-red were the fruit heaps awaiting the cart, and red were the cheeks of the wife

As when, 'neath the June tree she yielded her heart, and gain'd the one love of her life.

Red apple in hand, the fond husband draws near, and kissing her cheek still so fair,

Says: "Dear wife, early apples were precious and dear, but no fruit can with autumn's compare."

The season is winter, of year and of life; the earth wears a mantle of snow;

And snow wreaths adorn both the husband and wife who sit in the fire-light's warm glow.

Pearson Withdraws

Homer L. Pearson has withdrawn from the race for the nomination of prosecuting attorney before the democratic primaries. This at the present time looks as if Mayor Fuller of this city would have a walk over for the nomination. However "meeting is never over 'til they sing" and when some good republican is well groomed for the race at the general election, the Times predicts that the mayor will have to "go some" to come in first.

THE EUREKA SPRINGS TIMES

L. E. BAIRD, Editor and Manager.

Successors to the Weekly Times-Echo. Times established 1881. Echo established 1885.

A Newspaper devoted to the interests of Eureka Springs, Carroll County and the Republican party.

SUBSCRIPTION ONE DOLLAR THE YEAR.

Oklahoma dug 290 oil wells last month, of which only 12 per cent were dusters. The Southwest is a land of realization as well as promise.

However ancient the name of Smith, they cannot boast kin with Abraham and the patriarchs. The Bible says: "Now there was no smith found throughout all the land of Israel."

The democrats had a regular St. Vitus dance over the Ballinger-Pinchot affair until President Taft fired his conservation message into congress, and now they are running around again hunting up new "paramounts."

Arkansas takes the lead in the drainage movement in congress, but every state has a large interest in the reclamation of wet lands and should realize that Arkansas is backing a large national question.—Globe Democrat.

Gov. Deneen asserts that opposition to waterway power development in Illinois is due to the anxiety of speculators to beat the state in getting hold of this great source of revenue. The people of Illinois appreciated the point when they voted $20,000,000 for a waterway from Joliet to the head of navigation on the Illinois river, to be perpetually the property of the state, and the income of the leased power to be eventually net revenue for the state treasury.

CONSOLIDATION OF SCHOOLS

To those having a keen interest in the advancement of the commonwealth of Arkansas, there is no more acute problem than the education of the children of the state. School facilities for the children of the rural districts are so meager in many instances as to amount to almost nothing.

In the following article J. W. Kuykendall, of Ft. Smith, advances what the Times believes to be the best, cheapest and most satisfactory method of dealing with this problem of such vital interest to the state:

"The greatest handicap to the development of the rural schools of Arkansas is a small, weak, inefficient school district. Such a school district, with its small revenue, must, of necessity, have short terms of school and poorly paid teachers.

"The crying need of the rural schools of the state is the consolidation of small districts into a unit approximately as large as a political township, conforming to the natural boundary lines of streams and mountains. This larger district, where necessary, may maintain several schools, but where possible the small schools should be consolidated into a large central graded school, where high school branches may also be taught.

"The ultimate solution of the rural school problem is in central schools and the transportation of the children in wagonettes. The first step in this solution is the abolition of the small weak district and the substitution of the larger territory, under the control of one school board. This system prevails in a large number of states in the Union, and the experiment has been tried in a number of places in Arkansas, and wherever tried it has met with marked success.

The farce of one teacher attempting to teach all grades and a great variety of subjects should give way to a more systematic classification of pupils and diversion of the class among a number of teachers, to the marked advantage of the children. Efficient principals, comfortable houses, adequate janitor service and many other advantages would accrue.

"The chief obstacle to this reform, aside from simple inertia, seems to be in the opposition of those who fear such a system would remove the schools from local control. The large district would not lessen the control of the policies of the school by its patrons, but one-man domination, factional bickerings and neighborhood dissensions would be eliminated, to the good of the cause of education."

GIVE US MEN

The time is rapidly approaching when the citizens of Eureka Springs will be called upon to select a majority of the city council owing to expiration of terms and vacancies from other causes. This is not too early a season to be looking about for men for these positions. The Times stands for the election of representative business men who not only have the ability, but also the courage to give Eureka Springs a clean business like administration.

That the affairs of the city are being poorly administered, is perfectly patent to the least observing. Whether this is due to the inability, the carelessness, or the cupid-ity of the present administration is not for the Times to say, but it remains that the above condition is true.

If the affairs of the city are improperly administered from any of the above causes—no matter what—it is the duty of every good citizen to do his utmost to change conditions. It is the duty of any loyal citizen, if the people want his services in a public way, to heed the call and give the people the best service his ability will allow.

They tell us that our best citizens will not accept office in the city administration. If this is true, it is largely because these men feel that they will be a minority in the council and their hands will be tied. The coming election gives Eureka Springs just the opportunity needed. A majority of the council is to be elected. Let us elect that majority from the best possible material—from the standpoint of ability, honesty and courage to carry out the principles believed to be necessary to a progressive, business administration of the city's affairs.

DID HE MEAN IT?

On Monday last the Times-Echo came out squarely in favor of the nomination of Congressman J. C. Floyd and opposing E. E. Mitchell. Among other things Congressman Floyd is warmly commended for sticking to his post in Washington, while Mr. Mitchell wages the hottest kind of fight for the nomination, pointing out the fact that Mr. Floyd has never been absent from the House except on the occasion of the death of his parents. Commenting further the Times-Echo says:

"This is a record that few congressmen, or other important officials, could claim. In fact, in more instances than one the people of Arkansas have been accustomed to seeing certain officials use up the greater part of their terms electioneering for another term, leaving the affairs of their offices to take care of themselves or putting them in the hands of incompetent assistants."

Now, of course, the editor of the Times-Echo could not have had in mind the present candidate for prosecuting attorney of this district and mayor of the city of Eureka Springs. Yet, these remarks seem, to the casual observer, to fit the case of our mayor to a "T".

The big insurgent riot in congress, predicted by the big democratic papers, is far fetched and immaterial as the awful row that was to occur in the Arkansas republican committee.—Salem Sun.

Will the free-traders kindly do a little more figuring and tell us why it is that a 10 per cent increase in the price of shoes is announced after the tariff on hides, against which they railed so long, has been removed?—Binghamton Republican.

The Master of Craven

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Basil Tempest, with the greatest novelist and poet, refusing to be further lionized, shuts himself up in Craven, his country home. His gloomy meditations are broken by his housekeeper, who has disobeyed his orders not to admit any one to the house. The visitor is Lucy Carew, an American, who has come to England to write a study of the author, but most of all to get a synopsis of his new suite of poems, having been promised a good position with a magazine if successful. Tempest, in a magazine, declares he will write no more, and asks her to go. After Lucy departs Tempest repents of his rudeness in sending her away at night in the rain. He overtakes her, but she refuses to return to Craven with him, and takes lodging in a cottage. Next morning Lucy receives a note from Tempest, apologizing for his rudeness and offering to assist her in writing her essay. Tempest dictates to Lucy, who listens spellbound as she writes.

The scribe wrote like lightning and listened spellbound as she wrote. The power of what she was going to transcribe shook her as Tempest developed the theme and warmed to his subject. Once as he paused to draw her eyes to his, her own ardent, deep, full of emotion, in tribute to the genius she had been permitted to see. She was unconscious how much of herself her uplifted face betrayed.

Tempest, as if she had bidden his eyelids to lift, opened his eyes, stopped speaking. A flush came into his face, he unfolded his arms and stirred. "Wait," he murmured, "don't move." He held her eyes for a second, then fell back, set her free, refolded his arms, and continued his dictation.

Miss Carew filled page after page with rapid characters. When he had definitely ceased she sighed, dropping her pencil. If she had yielded to impulse, she would have buried her head on her arms and so remained under the spell that had magnetized her. Too tactful in the presence of this uncontrolled and personal man to betray anything of herself or her with pretty, careful steps, picking her footing and shrinking as they cracked and rustled. At the foot of the avenue he skirted the railings of the park in search of a small gate for pedestrians and leading out into the road towards Billings Pike and Craven.

He had an idea, doubtless a very reasonable one, that if Miss Carew was as serious and good as she seemed she had every plan to run away—or to slip out of Craven by the morning train.

"She could not slip out before. Not!"—and he smiled at the idea—"unless she start a pin on foot, which I have no doubt she would be capable of doing if she knew me to be so early on the chase."

At Ramsell's Polly told him the lady had already started to walk to the train and Tim was to follow her later with her boxes.

Tempest, in whom the invigorating day awakened the best of spirits, was delighted. He wanted to find her flying. It pleased him to see his psychology was not at fault, and that he should as well have the pleasure of the chase.

"Yes," he nodded to Polly, who, mature and admiring, stood by the gate delivering her news. "Yes, I knew Miss Carew intended to leave, but I have a telephone for her, an important message which may keep her, possibly—at any rate, I must find her. Why did she start so soon?"

It seemed that Miss Carew had wished to go up Charm's hill, and in order to make the train she would be coming down Wood lane in the hour. Tempest rode away. At the end of Wood lane, just a little to the road-side, he saw the figure of a lady—the only lady in Cravenford, of course. She stood under a beech-tree, or under all there was left of its fine luxuriance the leaves raining around her in abundance.

Tempest took the direction and Serious Shooting Affray at Denver.

A dance at Jim Griffin's at Denver last Friday night was broken up with a serious shooting affray. Vol. Harrison, having been wounded by a shot through both lungs by Less Marriot.

The tragedy was the result of only a brief difficulty, the parties to the affray being comparative strangers. Os Turner, a bystander, narrowly escaped the bullet that wounded Harrison, the ball having passed through his coat, grazing his shoulder.

It was thought at the time and for several hours that Harrison could not recover, but the fact that he has thus far survived indicates that he has a fair chance now for recovery. The ball entered the back part of his left arm below the point of the shoulder and passed diagonally through the chest, passing out above the right nipple.

Marriott was immediately arrested and placed in jail Saturday, pending the result of Harrison's injuries.

Harrison lately came here from Jasper, Ark., and was making his home for the time being at the home of his sister, Mrs. Walter Villines, out northeast of town.

It is needless to explain that the people of Denver deeply regret the affair. It is just one more tragedy to be charged up to the use of strong drink.—Green Forest Tribune.

house by Representative Hinebaugh of Illinois in a speech urging the adoption of his resolution authorizing the interstate commerce commission to investigate the operations of this company now in receivership.

"This resolution should be passed," he said, "and an investigation made if for no other reason than this receivership had already been given as a reason why freight rates should be raised. As usual the public is asked to hold the bag and pay the fiddler when the operations of these gentlemen who are given to frenzied finance are brought to a halt.

"Many persons who have bought securities this company has sold during the last three years are anxious to know what portion of that money found its way into the company's treasury and how much was diverted into the pockets of certain officials.

"I am more than satisfied that a thorough investigation by the interstate commerce commission will demonstrate that the Frisco system under the management of B. F. Yoakum has never been conducted as a legitimate transportation company, but that it has been made the basis of a tremendous jobbing scheme to enrich the men who have been in a position to manipulate its securities.

"I believe it will also be found that great volumes of the stocks and bonds of this company have been sold far in excess of the true value of the tangible property owned by the company." Representative Hinebaugh charged that the receivership was not actually necessary.

This card brings to mind an article in one of the state exchanges recently, on city building. One suggestion one which appealed to us as the easiest and most practical—was Post Day. The idea was for every city to mail a certain number of postcards out to friends, or to take the cards from a list supplied by the community club secretary. This concerted effort would cost the individuals but a few cents, yet, if done by the city would be a burden.

What better information to send to the world than that given on school cards?

Besides there are many beautiful views sold by all dealers in Springfield which would attract the side world.

Arkansas Church Leads.

That the Pine Bluff Christian church has the champion Intermediate City of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions in the world was one interesting feature brought out at the Thursday morning session of the Arkansas State Missionary Convention at the First Christian church. A member of the circle presented the report for the year, showing that it had members, raised over $300 last year, did not miss a meeting, and maintained an orphan in India and a mission in Tennessee.

Following the report a banner was presented to the society to be kept one year, or as long as the society retained its supremacy in the work. Another pennant was given the president of the society for individual work.—Arkansas Democrat.

Class Meeting.
(From Wednesday's Daily.)
The Friendly Class of the South
Methodist church met with Mrs. Phillips last evening. A good attendance is reported.

The girls of the Friendly class are a happy crowd and always enjoy to the fullest these weekly class meetings.

They planned to serve ice cream and cake on the lawn at Mrs. Bryant's on Thursday, June 19—Excursion Day.
Also the girls decided to go "berrying"
Friday morning, leaving the Crescent Spring at 6:30. Each girl hopes to bring back one gallon, this to be sold and the money put into the class treasury.

Mrs. Phillips, the hostess on this occasion, has as her guests two brother and two sisters from Sherman, Tex.
Miss Juanita Young, a girl of 18, we claimed at once as a member. She promised to attend Sunday school.
The little baby sister, Edith, won our hearts at once, so sweet and dainty is she.

Mrs. Phillips, assister by Miss Juanita, served sherbet and nabiscoes.
The next class meeting will be with Misses Bess and Dorothy Brush.

WISE SAYINGS.
Elect...through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ.
1 Pet. 1:2.

My salvation is due, first of all, to God's choice of me, not to my choice of God. I do, indeed, choose Him, but because He first chose me. My love, my coming to Him are all to be traced to His love. His coming to me, His yearning toward me. He begins the work without my knowledge and co-operation. He carries it on with my knowledge and co-operation.
I come to see his plan, to recognize its perfect beauty and benevolence. I, by faith, come into that plan, as a planet wheels into its predestined orbit; and begin in holy obedience to revolve about God, held in my place by the compelling force of His grace and love.—A. T. Pierson, D. D.

A Lady's Comment On Medicine and Religion

The following letter is from a lady whose name I am not at liberty to use. If I should mention her name she would be known by almost every reader. She writes in part:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:
"Your article entitled 'Medicine and Religion' has been read and re-read by me many times. It seems to me that the article contains the substance of all that has been said about Christian Science, new thought, suggestive therapeutics and other forms of mental healing.

"I am very much pleased to observe that you are putting out into the world such useful literature. It will do untold good, without doubt; not only for those who take medicine, but for those who try to get along without taking medicine. Your article is terse, to the point, and will be read by thousands.

"Medicine and religion have always been very closely associated. Only in very recent years have the two been regarded as separate professions. I am glad you brought this out so clearly.

The tendency of to-day is strongly in the direction of medicine and religion coming back together again. With your immense facilities for spreading useful information I am sure you will greatly assist the progress of the times in sending out broadcast such articles.
I want you to know that your efforts are appreciated.

"As to Peruna, I have nothing to say.
I very seldom make use of any medicine. But I assure you that your article has so enthused me with the good advice it contains that if I have any need for medicine I shall certainly buy a bottle of Peruna. I shall not neglect to recommend it to others also." PEare making inquiries for the old-blue cloth on ordinary occasions, which on Sundays and holidays changes to a woolen fabric of darker hue; they bear titles on the front and back.

There is a sprinkling of the poetical element and a good deal of fiction, but each carried a historical biographical index often illegible. Stories of crime mingled with tragedies, or you find a farce or a comedy.

Moreover the volumes grow, decay and die. Chapters are added from time to time, but the take seldom ends happily. These are the books that God made—not always much to look at, but containing a great deal of interest if you can get beneath the covers.

ANTI-SPITTING STATE RULES.

The following anti-spitting regulations were announced Wednesday by the State Board of Health:

1. Spitting upon the walls, floor, steps, stairways, sides or platforms of any railroad, steam, electric or street car, station, steamboat or ferry boat, elevator car or any public or private conveyance or of any private building, hotel, lodging house, hospital, factory, workshop, or other places of employment, or any house, tenement house, jail, market or upon the sidewalk, in any public or private place, or where people congregate or where people cater to the public, is hereby prohibited.

2. It shall be the duty of every corporation or persons in charge of any place mentioned in the preceding paragraph to furnish as many receptacles for the reception of sputum as may be required by the health officer having jurisdiction, of a pattern, shape or design approved by said health officer, and such receptacle shall, at all times contain at least one-half pint of clear water and shall be washed daily until thoroughly clean.

3. It shall be the duty of every corporation or persons in charge of any place frequented by the general public, mentioned in paragraph 1 of this section, to have as many copies of these rules and regulations as may be required by the health officer having jurisdiction, printed, framed and permanently posted in a conspicuous place.

4. Form of printed notice: "Do not spit on the floor. It spreads tuberculosis and other infectious diseases. Penalty for violation of this rule: Not less than $10 nor more than $100, or any imprisonment not exceeding one month or both."

ARKANSAS.

Some native son at a banquet responded to the toast "Arkansas" as follows:

"If all the wheat in Arkansas were one grain, the only place to plant it would be the Grand Canyon of Arizona, the only hole in the earth big enough to hold it. If all the corn raised in the state were one ear, the only way to shell it would be by using steam stump pullers and extracting one grain at a time from the cob. If all the cattle in Arkansas were one cow she would browse the tender herbage of the tropics and frisk the icicles off the North Pole with her tail and supply milk enough to fill a canal reaching from Little Rock to Chicago on which to ship the boatloads of her cheese and butter. If all the chickens in Arkansas were one rooster he could straddle the Rocky Mountains like a Colossus and crow until he shook the rings off the planet Saturn. If all the hogs raised in Arkansas were one hog, he could plant his hind feet on the soil of Cuba, his forefeet on the Isthmus of Panama and with one root of his huge snout dig a sea-level canal from ocean to ocean. If all the mules raised in Arkansas were one mule he could plant one foot on the soil of Texas and the other amid the forests of Maine and with his hind feet kick the face off the man in the moon."

Think It Over.

Did you ever write to a mail order house and state that you were a little cramped and would like to buy a few goods on credit? Did you ever write to the mail order house and ask them to send along a dollar to assist a poor neighbor who was in destitute condition? Did you ever ask a mail order house to attend the dinner given by the ladies of the missionary society to raise a little money to paint the parsonage? Where is there a mail order house that contributes annually to the upkeep of the local baseball team? During conditions like the above hasn't the local merchant played an important part? Looking at it from another standpoint: What would you think of paying the local dealer cash for goods you had never seen, and pay two weeks before receiving them? Think it over.—Chanute Tribune.

or association. He said he had prepared a brief, talked with senators and tried to see the president. He testified that he maintained offices from which newspaper advertisements and "bulletins" were submitted to a committee in New York representing Hawaiian sugar factories.

Carter testified that the domestic sugar producers had spent "something less than $100,000 in their fight."

"If we had paid out $800,000 we would consider it well spent, if we could save the $82,000 invested," said he. "We propose to keep someone here to continue the fight as long as the right of free speech exists."

Covers Arkansas Cases.

The decision of the United States supreme court yesterday in the so-called rate cases is of much interest to Arkansas, inasmuch as the decision covers the case appealed from the state courts to the federal court by the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern railway and the case of the St. Louis Southwestern railway which were appealed from the United States court for the eastern district of the state. In these cases United States Judge Trierber held the maximum freight rate orders and the two-cent passenger fare law were unconstitutional because they were confiscatory.

The higher court rendered its decision in the case originating in the state of Minnesota wherein the court held the rates of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad were confiscatory and unconstitutional. The decision is a victory for the state on the interstate commerce phases of the controversy and upon the confiscatory features with the exception of that portion affecting the Minneapolis & St. Louis road. The court's decision in effect is that the state has power to fix reasonable rates on interstate traffic until such time as congress shall decide to make regulations.

$18,000 Verdict.

London, June 7.—Verdict for the plaintiffs against all defendants was rendered by the jury today in the test case of shopkeepers against Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and her daughters, Pethick Lawrence and Mrs. Tuke for window smashing. Judgments for $18,000 were rendered against each defendant.

Associate Justices C. D. Wood and Frank Smith dissented from the opinion, but Associate Justices W. F. Kirby and J. C. Hart supported the opinion by the chief justice.

In all the criminal annals of Arkansas, there probably is not a more revolting crime recorded than the murder of Ella Barham near Harrison, Thursday, November 21, 1912. It was a crime which sent a shudder of horror through all who read the ghastly details of the murder and caused men for weeks to seek the life of the man accused of the killing.

On the morning of Thursday, Nov. 21, 1912, Ella Barham, 18 years old, pretty and popular in the country near Harrison, left her farm home and traveled horseback to the home of Mrs. Briant, a few miles distant. She placed an order for a hat with Mrs. Briant and after spending an hour there, left at 11 o'clock for her home. She never was seen again in life.

When the girl failed to appear at her home later in the day, a search for her was instituted by her parents. Towards the close of the afternoon the horse she was riding was found, but there was no trace of the girl.

Night fell and neighbors of the frantic parents continued the search through the timber lands nearby, guided in their hunt by the feeble rays of lanterns.

At 9 o'clock, when hope of finding the girl almost fled, the searching party found the dismembered body of Ella Barham in the wood near the Davidson home. But the discovery of the mutilated body in the still of night sent a chill of fear through the hearts of the searchers, for the girl had been battered and cut almost beyond human semblance.

The following day the posse which began work on the case found first clues which led to the arrest of Davidson. Small pools of blood were discovered at a spot in the woods 683 yards from the Davidson home and nearby the impression of a body was seen in the bough of a felled tree. In close proximity to the tree the shoes and stockings last worn by Ella Barham were found and next her sidecomb was discovered.

Leading to the edge of Crooked Creek, the searchers followed a trail of blood to the spot where the body had been found, in the sand and gravel of the creek bed, the print of bare feet could be discerned. Two days later a loaded revolver, which afterwards at 2:50 this afternoon, leaving there 25 minutes later, making the time due in Eureka Springs 4 o'clock.

One hundred of these have made reservations at the Crescent, and the other hundred will probably go to the various other hotels.

Today's Joplin Globe gives a little additional information concerning the coming guests:

"The third, and what is considered will be the most successful trade extension excursion of the season, or in the history of Joplin, will begin at 7:15 o'clock this morning, when about 250 business men of Joplin join with fifty Webb City merchants in a two days' trip into northern Arkansas. In the crowd will be few women. It will be the last booster trip until fall.

A band of sixteen pieces, a portion of Jolly's organization, will be engaged for the two days' outing. It will lead processions through towns where stops are made and furnish music for the occasion. A distributor has also been engaged to circulate 6,000 booklets, showing views of Joplin. Other advertising will be distributed also. Webb City literature will be distributed by members of that delegation.

The sale of tickets for the excursion began yesterday morning.

"A number of business men who feel that they cannot spare two days away from their business have decided to accompany the boosters to Eureka Springs, remain there tonight, then return by regular train tomorrow morning. This will place them in Joplin at 10:50 o'clock, by leaving Eureka Springs, Ark., at 7:40 o'clock tomorrow morning."

The Webb City news column in the Globe says: "The Webb City boosters will be decked out in red and yellow hatbands and pennants, advertising various kinds of advertising literature.

"The special coach in which the Webb City 'live wires' and their guests from the neighboring towns will ride, was set out here yesterday morning by the railroad company and a committee from the Commercial Club placed banners on each side of the coach. The banners run the full length of the car.

"During the last week the club has been busy securing views of the various business and educational institutions of the city, which will be thrown on the screen in one of the moving picture theatres in Eureka Springs, Ark., on Wednesday afternoon."

strengthen of the Bull Moose cause in Kansas, is giving the few remaining leaders in the movement grave concern. It is virtually conceded that the Progressives will never be much of a factor in Kansas politics again. There is strong evidence that a concerted move is to be made to carry the fragments of the Roosevelt party into the Democratic ranks.

William Allen White, Bull Moose national committeeman, who is so rabidly anti-Republican that it is believed he would sooner join the socialists than ever sail under the guise of Republicanism again, is leading off with the new propaganda of the Progressives. White began his campaign of converting Progressives to believe in the Democratic doctrine by fulsomely praising Governor Hodges. Now he is singing the virtues of President Wilson in his best "Empy tenor."

The plot is to unite the few remaining Progressives from Republicanism and gradually edge them over into the Democratic party. The story that White will succeed Bristow as Democratic senator from Kansas in case he delivers the remaining Progressives to the Democratic party is given some credence.

"Let me tell you something," declares White in an interview printed yesterday. "In my speeches I have been saying the handsomest things possible about President Wilson, and his name always gets applause from a Progressive crowd. He gets the same amount of applause that Roosevelt gets."

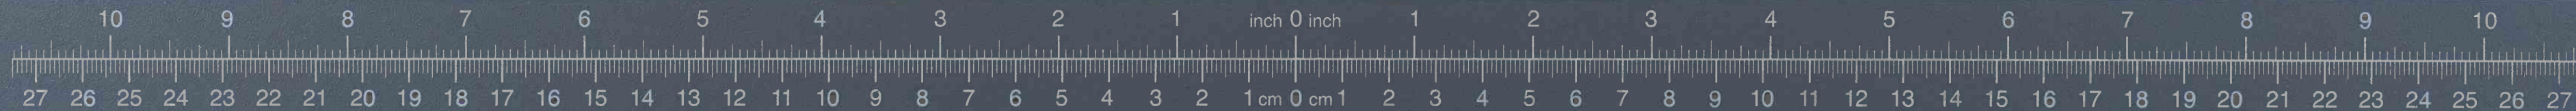

"They like the way Wilson is bossing the making of the tariff bill," says White in his interview, "holding up the patronage to make the pussy-foot congressmen walk straight. They like the fundamental democracy he is putting into public life at Washington."

Some of White's friends think he is overdoing the scheme to drive the Progressives into the Democratic party, but those who know him best say that is one of his fundamental characteristics in politics—overdoing it.

Plan to Reorganize in July.

Washington, June 4.—Plans for reorganizing the Republican congressional committee early in June are being considered by the committee's officers. It was said today that there probably would be no special efforts to further delay the reorganization. Representatives Burke, of South Dakota; Madden, of Illinois and Gardner, of Massachusetts, still are most prominently mentioned as chairmanship possibilities.

Chairman Hilles of the Republican national committee, today discussed with Representative Burke proposed co-operation between the national and congressional committees and suggested that the congressional executive committee draft a plan of action.

finger's room. There is a rule against carrying large packages in the passenger elevator, and the boy used the freight elevator. By some accident the violin was crushed and broken into pieces.

When the violinist was notified of the accident she became hysterical. The violin cost $3,500 it is said, and in its purchase she had invested her savings. But the money loss was the least important. To the true virtuoso such a violin is a priceless treasure. It is the inspiration. It is loved and cherished as a senseless thing, rather than a man-made contrivance of mere wood and catgut. And for a time the young woman mourned and could not be comforted until some hope was brought to her in the possibility of an expert putting the pieces of the instrument together again. In this hope every bit was saved, and a Chicago instrument maker will try to restore the violin.

"Why I would not be without Bell Telephone Service," said a local farmer, "is the pleasure it gives my wife and the knowledge that it is her protection while I am away."

Farmers frequently have to be away from home. On such occasions the rural Bell Telephone gives a sense of security to the housewife.

Of course you have a Bell Telephone?

Mountain Home, June 1.—The Clarion, which is published near the little postoffice of Three Brothers in this county, is probably the most unique paper published in the state. This uniqueness does not reflect itself from its complication or make-up, but from its isolated location. Sitting in his sanctum sanctorium in the shadow of Long mountain and the Three Brothers, three miles from the nearest postoffice and 20 miles from the nearest town, F. A. Emerson, editor, grinds out the only real, genuine backwoods paper in the state. It is a backwoods paper in every respect but one and that is the editor. The Clarion reflects modern thought and ideas. It is published from the log cabin on his homestead and the rustling and persuasive ability of the editor is making it pay.

Emerson was one of the many who are trying to win in the game of life on a city salary, the majority of whom get eueched, when the "back to the land" idea swept over the United States with overwhelming force two years ago. The idea carried him from Portland, Ore., where he was working at that time, to the Ozark hills and onto a 150-acre homestead, where with hundreds of others he is making a fight for a little bit of real land he can call his own to tread on, and to take a living from in later years. Two years ago the section in which he is now located and which his small paper is serving was a wilderness; a myriad of green-clad mountains; of long ridges matted with wild blue stem grass and wood growths and rocks. A place where cattle roamed and wild hogs made their home. Then people came, and now every 150 acres of this seemingly worthless land has a cabin and a clearing on it.

Emerson, a printer, was struck with the beauties of this country and with the great possibilities of its development and filed his claim. He was encouraged by his increasing neighbors to start a small newspaper, and with seemingly overwhelming odds against him he started. He solicited most of his subscribers on woods paths and from dwellers in log cabins. They all stuck to him manfully and the hardships which come to a settler the first few years on a homestead have been made easy for him from the finance derived from his efforts as an editor. His plant is not a large plant, just a small outfit. The three-deck press which spits out city extras is absent

WISE SAYINGS.

He expounded upon them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself. Luke 24:27.

We find, as step by step we pass on in our search. Another Who is speaking to us; and there comes a time of special blessed divine revelation, when through the Scriptures He makes known Himself, as He made known Himself to those disciples in the breaking of bread. Probably when He lifted those pierced hands to offer a few words of blessing on the food, they saw the prints of the nails. He still continues to take devout disciples into the secret place with Himself, and show the marks of the Crucified. Then even the crown of thorns blossoms into the wreath of celestial roses, and appears as the diadem of God upon His brow.—A. T. Pierson, D. D.

Violators of forest laws in the Ozark National Forest, was apprehended by Deputy U. S. Marshal Snow Sunday and preliminary hearing was held before U. S. Commissioner W. F. Mitchell Thursday morning.

The fire had been reported to Forest Officer Dale as being set by Cook on the morning of April 15 between 9 a. m. and 10 a. m., at a time when the forest was exceptionally dry and the winds high. Under these conditions over 1000 acres were burned over in Sycamore District of the Ozark forest, causing many hundreds of dollars damage to reproduction and range.

Because of the seriousness of the crime the defendant was bound over to the October federal grand jury under a bond of $2,000.

Important witnesses in the case are Mrs. Liddia Greer, her daughter, Sadie, fifteen years old, and son, Jim. Mrs. Greer and her daughter, while hunting a mare in the woods on the morning of April 15 saw Cook traveling along the highway placing burning matches to the leaves at short intervals. To escape detection they concealed themselves behind two trees. A short time later while checking up this fire, discovered from the steel watch tower on McGowan's point by Lookout McCuiston, forest officers brought these facts to light.

This is but one of several cases which have been prosecuted by the department of justice. A determined effort is being made to secure convictions because of the tremendous damage even the light surface fires of this region do to the forest. The penalty for willfully setting the forest on fire is a fine of $5,000.00 or imprisonment for 2 years or both.
